Krishna Reddy, Prof. in Physics, Yogi Vemana University, Kadapa has given an elaborated talk on Space i.e., exclusively on achievements of Indian space Research Organization (ISRO) in launching satellites into earth's orbit for various applications like remote sensing, weather monitoring and for communication. He also dealt with weather monitoring systems in polar regions. Also, the future prospects of Physics as a career are explained to students in a nutshell. The students were very much enlightened and excited by the lecture.

Outcome: Students got awareness about the role of ISRO in Space Physics. They came to know about the technologies in weather monitoring and the career prospects in Physics.

BACKGROUND OF THE WEBINAR

Abstract

The WHO declared the novel coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) an emergency of international concern on 30 January 2020 and a pandemic on 11 March. According to WHO's Situation Report - 79, as of 13 August 2021, the epidemic has caused 43,23,139 deaths worldwide. While it is seemingly nearing its end in China, where it was first reported, it is still on the rise in Europe, in the USA and in other parts of the world, including in many low-income and middle-income countries (LMICs). The pandemic has triggered unprecedented measures worldwide. Many countries have installed travel bans, confinement and lockdown policies. These responses have been adopted in an 'emergency' mode, and are largely reactionary, aimed at mitigating the spread of the disease while waiting for a specific cure and/or vaccine to be developed. The COVID-19 pandemic has triggered unprecedented measures worldwide, which have often been adopted in an 'emergency' mode and are largely reactionary a paradigm shift in global health governance, from a specific reactional paradigm to a systemic, coordinated and preventive paradigm aimed at helping populations reduce their individual risk factors and augment their natural immunity.

The world is now witnessing a paradigm shift, Nations everywhere are grappling with the concurrent waves of the Covid-19 pandemic. The deterioration in relationship with china with the countries of the world, shifting traditional geo-political issues. In addition to this transitions in old geopolitical issues, there are some ongoing global trends that cannot be ignored. More than 30 years after the Cold War, the Western victors are finding that their firm-held values, such as liberal democracy and free market economies, are clouded with doubts. Digital transformation is another trend that bears scrutiny. As artificial intelligence and the internet of things develop with increasing speed, they will have unprecedented effects on people's lives, national governance and international politics in the upsurge of Global Pandemics like COVID-19. Meanwhile, in Japan's immediate vicinity, massive militaries still confront each other on the Korean Peninsula, Afghanistan, Middle -Eastern countries the possibility of abrupt changes there cannot be ruled out.

Hence, in this COVID-19 scenario, there is a urgent need to rethink strategies and chart-out technology road-maps; post-pandemic era would see paradigm shift in social structure, global and economic cooperation.
